Route 42 Playground Project Update: Phase I scheduled for Completion!

It really does take a village! For the past two years, dedicated members of our Tri-Valley community have joined together to meet the needs of some of our youngest citizens.

Initial planning began in the spring of 2021, and one year ago, the Playground Committee was formed by volunteers to plan, fundraise, and build a community playground at the Route 42 Community Park in Grahamsville. In collaboration with Tri-Valley Little League, Tri-Valley PTO, the Town of Neversink, and countless local organizations, businesses, and individuals, the committee successfully raised funds to nearly complete Phase I of the project!

The committee foresees the project will be completed in two phases: Phase I involves the installation of the primary play structure, shown here, which will be suitable for children ages 2-12. The initial, primary structure is scheduled for installation by early May.

Efforts are currently underway for Phase II, which will include installation of additional components which will be ADA compliant. The committee would like to issue a heartfelt word of gratitude to the businesses, organizations, and individuals who have contributed to the project to date. The committee has also applied for grant funding to offset costs for Phase II, and hope to obtain a decision in regard to whether the grant has been approved by July.

Adele Barnard, retired kindergarten educator, early childhood advocate, and chairwoman of the Playground Committee shares, "On behalf of the playground committee, I want to thank everyone who supported this initiative. Our community has always been known to step up for our local children! You go to baseball or soccer games and you always see young siblings of players running about playing around the sidelines. To date, Grahamsville did not yet have a playground accessible to kids during the daytime hours, nor is there a safe structure for toddlers. How wonderful it is that the new playground will offer moms, dads, grandparents and caregivers someplace safe for children to play, get physical exercise, and experience the joy of social interaction face to face! This is so important, now more than ever, as we come out of the pandemic."

For additional information about the project, please follow their Facebook page, "Route 42 Community Playground Project," or contact the chairperson at ambarnard57@gmail.com.

OBITUARY

Bunny Hubert Woloszczak passed away suddenly on Monday, March 20, 2023.

For anyone who didn't know her and those who did would agree, Bunny was a funny and cheerful soul. She took no nonsense, cracked jokes with the best of them, loved her community, and loved the theater. Bunny was Vice President, Director and Stage Manager at the Sullivan County Dramatic Workshop since 2002.

Most of all, her family was her pride and joy.

There will be a memorial service at Bunny's favorite place, the Rivoli Theater in South Fallsburg on Saturday, April 1st at 2pm. Bring a picture or good memory of Bunny that you'd like to share. We know not everyone can handle the spotlight but we would love the stories or photos.

Bunny is already greatly missed.

Fairness

by Caroline Bertholf Tri-Valley Student

Being fair shouldn't be rare. When you share it shows that you care About being fair. When you share it shoud be equal. Think about other people. Being fair means that you care About other people's feelings.

Household Hint:

Stop reds from running

I haven't tried this yet, but was recently told...

"Unless you have a fondness for pinktinted clothing, take one simple precaution to prevent red - or other brightly dyed - washable clothes from ruining your wash loads. Soak your new garments in a few cups of undiluted white vinegar for 10-15 minutes before their first washing. You'll never have to worry about running colors again!"

THE TOWNSMAN

Nature Column - L. Comando A tribute to the memory of all of the Townsman Ladies that we have loved so much and lost... Peggy DeWire, Avril Pappa, Joan Hall, Polly Hill, Joyce Lockhart, Jean Helthaler, Karen Curry, Barbara Slater, Shirley Davis and Hulda Vernooy.

Return of Redwing Blackbirds

According to Peggy DeWire, as she wrote many years back, "I saw a robin but it wasn't spring. I found peepers but it still wasn't spring. Then I heard a Redwing blackbird singing O-ka-lee down by the pond and it was spring!" Well, I heard the O-ka-lee, but still haven't seen any Red Wing

Blackbirds in Sundown

You will recognize the calls of the Red-winged Blackbird. The male's song, accompanied by a display of his red shoulder patches, is a scratchy o-ka-lee. The female also sings, typically a scolding chatter chit chit chit chit chit cheer with a high slurred whistle, teerteer-teerr-eeee.

These stocky, broad-shouldered red-winged blackbirds have a slender, conical bill and a medium-length tail. They are often defined by their hump-backed silhouette while perched. The common name for the Redwing Blackbird comes from the black adult male's distinctive red shoulder patches that are visible when the male bird is flying. Male Red-winged Blackbirds do everything they can to get noticed as they sit on high perches and sing all day long. The females are more subdued and have a muted coloring, with brown streaks overall, that are paler on the breast and often have whitish eyebrows. Females stay low as they lurk through vegetation for food. The female solely constructs a cup-shaped basket of grasses –the nest– made of sedge and mosses, lined with mud, then bound to surrounding grasses or branches in loose colonies in cattails, rushes, grasses, sedge, alder or willow bushes.

Red-winged Blackbirds are polygynous, with territorial males defending up to 10 females. However, females frequently copulate with males other than their social mate and often lay clutches of mixed paternity. Pairs raise two or three clutches per season, in a new nest for each clutch. A clutch consists of three or four, and rarely five, eggs that are oval, smooth, slightly glossy, and measure about 1 3/4 in. They are pale bluish green, marked with brown, purple, and/or black, with most markings around the larger end of the egg. The eggs are incubated by the female and hatch in 11 to 12 days. Redwing Blackbirds are blind and without feathers when hatched, but are ready to leave the nest 11-14 days after hatching. The young birds resemble the female, but are paler below and have buff feather fringes.

Redwing Blackbirds aggressively defend their territory from other animals and frequently attack much larger birds. Males have been known to swoop at humans who encroach upon their nesting territory during breeding season.

Nest predation is common. Several adaptations have evolved including group nesting that reduces the risk of individual attacks from preying enemies by increasing the number of alert parents. Nesting over water also reduces the likelihood of predation, along with alarm calls. Their nests offer a strategic advantage over predators in that they are often well concealed in thick, waterside reeds. Males often act as sentinels, employing a variety of calls to denote the kind and severity of danger. Mobbing, especially by males, is also used to scare off unwanted predators.

Redwing Blackbirds are prey to barn owls and hawks, crows, ravens, magpies and herons. Additional predators of blackbirds of all ages and their eggs include raccoons, mink, foxes and snakes.

The Redwing Blackbird (Agelaius phoeniceus) is a passerine bird of the family Icteridae found in most of North America. They are omnivorous meaning they feed primarily on plant materials, including seeds from weeds and waste grain such as corn and rice, but about a quarter of their diet consists of insects and other small animals, especially during breeding season. They prefer insects such as dragonflies, damselflies, butterflies, moths, and flies, but also will eat snails, frogs, eggs, carrion, worms, spiders and mollusks. During the summer Redwinged Blackbirds enjoy a feast of blueberries and blackberries.

Even with a winter chill and a splash of snow, it is Spring. It is time to look and listen for the birds in your back yard. Maybe you will be lucky to see a handsome Redwing Blackbird, singing a song filled with hope that warm sunny weather will soon return to the Catskills.

News from your Town of Neversink Parks & Rec

Well they say spring is here but I'm still looking for it! Crazy weather we've been having!! My poor crocuses are trying to pop thru the icy ground and I'm starting to see buds on some of my flowering bushes. I wish I could tell them to stay put and don't come out yet because I'm told this cold and snowy sleet is not over!!!

What is over is our Community Ice Rink. It has closed for the season! And what an incredible season we had. There were well over 1000 skaters that enjoyed the rink this year! And our Disco Nite and Super Bowl Sunday Party were a great success. A BIG thank you to all the patrons that helped make this the best year ever for the Ice Rink. And a very special thank you to Stu Alexander, Joan Mingo, Walt Zeitschel and Ric Coombe. They are the folks that made this rink possible this year. THANK YOU. And see everyone next year at the rink!

Parks & Rec started their annual planning for this year's events and activities. Some of our favorites that we are bringing back this year are Movies at the Fairgrounds and the Scavenger Hunt. This year we will be showing movies on FRIDAY NIGHTS starting June 30th. We are still deciding on what movies to show so if you have any suggestions send them to cwparksandrec@gmail.com. Our Scavenger Hunt will once again take place during the Grahamsville Little World's Fair (August 18-20) and we plan on having our drawing for the kids bikes as we have done in the past.

Another incredible event happening again this year that Parks & Rec is so proud to be part of is the 2nd ANNUAL VETFEST! Mark your calendars on August 5th for this very special and worthy event focusing on helping our Vets. This year they will have many new things planned for a full day of fun!

New events we are looking at having this year include a KARAOKE NIGHT and a STARGAZING NIGHT both to be held at the Fairgrounds. We are also looking into several workshops, including BARN QUILTS 101; BEES-How to Raise and Reap their Rewards; and a PAINT & SIP Day. Any suggestions on workshops you would like us to hold, please let me know at cwparksandrec@gmail.com. And we are looking into GUIDED HIKES that will be geared towards our Seniors, but everyone can participate. This activity will help us all reach our Be Healthy in 2023 goals!

Finally, Parks & Rec will again be actively supporting this year's Antique Tractor Show. We will be looking for yard sale participants and crafters. The Antique Tractor Club is in the planning phases, and are looking at several new activities to help make this year fun for the entire family. The Club will still have all of the events and displays that they have had in the past but are looking for more things to make this year's show an event you won't want to miss. If you have any suggestions let me know at cwparksandrec@gmail.com.

And one final note, we have sadly said goodbye to our Board Member Melanie Schwartz. She was a great asset to our Parks & Rec team and will be sorely missed. We welcome our new Board Member Valerie Brown and look forward to working with her as we move forward.

Keep reading your Townsman and checking our Facebook page as we will be sharing more details on these events and activities. Until our next update, everyone be safe, stay healthy and most of all be happy. And as always if you any suggestions or questions for Parks and Rec. send them to me at cwparksandrec@gmail.com.

Just in case you're wondering, we'll be re-running some of our best and most popular book reviews. They will be described as our Legacy Mysterious Book Reports. Send us a quick request if you have a favorite that you'd like to see again and we'll do our best to re-publish it.

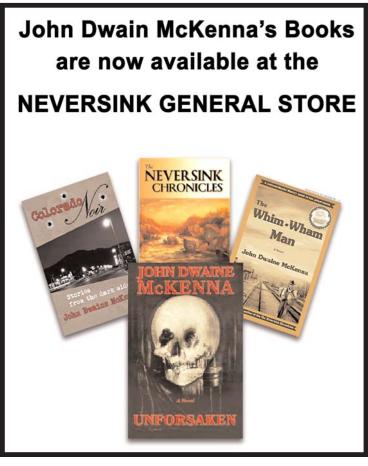

Mysterious Book Report No. 27 Published August 10, 2016 The Empire of Night Legacy Mysterious Book Report No. 196 by John Dwaine McKenna

One hundred years ago, all of Europe was in the midst of what was then called the Great War, or World War I as we now know it. It was the first fully mechanized war and the battlefield casualties were so great that they're almost incomprehensible by today's standards, due to the invention of new war machines like the belt-fed water-cooled machine gun; armor plated mobile gun platforms called tanks; gigantic artillery pieces mounted on railroad cars and moved by locomotives, that could hurl twenty-four inch shells for fifteen to twenty miles; submarines that prowled the oceans in groups known as wolf packs, which devastated and terrorized shipping; motorized heavier-than-air machines called aero planes, which battled for supremacy in the sky; and most disturbing of all perhaps, the invention and use of poison gasses based on chlorine and phosgene, capable of killing by the thousands. As all of those developments were happening on the battlefields, another newly-developed weapon was terrorizing the civilian citizens of London. They were giant airships called Zeppelins which came calling in the night without warning, bringing indiscriminate death to men, women and children as they dropped high explosive and incendiary bombs on the helpless and innocent victims in the streets below.

The Empire of Night, (Mysterious Press, $26.00, 401 pages, ISBN 978-0-8021-2323-7) by Robert Olen Butler is the third installment of his delightful Christopher Marlowe Cobb series of novels which began with The Hot Country, which was about German involvement in the Mexican Civil War, circa 1915; then continues with The Star of Istanbul, about the sinking of the passenger liner Lusitanian and German activity in the Middle East during World War I; and now, his newest, The Empire of Night, about the bombing of London during the early to middle parts of the war. All feature the intrepid and fearless newspaper reporter and citizen-spy, whom we know simply as Kit.

The Empire of Night is character-driven historical fiction at its best, with all the action, intrigue, treachery, danger and drama of any contemporary spy novel, while also featuring a tender, but ultimately tragic love affair at it's core. With the ground campaign stalemated in France and Belgium, the German high command is desperate to find a way to gain the upper hand. Their plan is to turn the Zeppelins into unstoppable killing machines that rain death from the skies . . . unless they can be stopped by Kit Cobb ... who may lose his life in the process. History comes alive in the hands of Pulitzer-Prize-winning author Robert Olen Butler, and he's created one of his most memorable and endearing protagonists in contemporary fiction -making him one of my absolute favorites! Do yourself a favor and read this great series and you, like me, will be eagerly looking forward to the next book.

And Hey! Check out our combined website that's simple to use and easy as pie to leave your comments! We're looking forward to hearing from all of you.

てhe Olive Jar by Carol Olsen LaMonda Idle Guests

I am great at giving things away; however, I find it painful to THROW a perfectly good item away. If you come to my house and admire something, beware, it will be yours.

As I look around my house, I have some perfectly good items that I like or love that just live here with me collecting dust. Here is an impartial list of my guests in my house.

A melon baller. I have never balled a melon in years, but someday I might.

The FamilyMemoir, PROSILIO...

... in Greek means "Toward the Sun," was written by Carol Olsen LaMonda. Carol writes the column "The Olive Jar" for Ye Olde Tri-Valley Townsman. This local author has been busy guesting at book clubs who have chosen this local memoir as their book choice. Feel the warmth of "Prosilio" as you read Carol's memoirs cuddled up in your favorite chair. It also makes a great gift! Prosilio is available at Amazon or Barnes and Noble on-line as a soft or hard cover or as a downloadable e-book for Nook or Kindle. Go to: http://amazon.com or http://barnesandnoble.com and type in Prosilio in the search to order your copy of Prosilio

A VCR cassette of "The Da Vinci Code" even though I do not own a VCR. My mom's ceramic teapot shaped like a fat, happy gardener. I drink coffee.

Numerous canvas luggage sets that are now replaced by new carry-on and checked bag, gifts from hubby.

A set of darling opera gloves although I have never seen a real opera.

A milk glass luncheon plate set of twenty-four just incase a few friends stop by for a tuna sandwich. No one has yet, but they just might.

A dozen of matching glass pigs.

Two wooden easels that collapse at will but can hold a painting if no one comes close to them or sneezes.

A refrigerator magnet from Maui even though I have only been to Oahu and the Big Island.

A box of probably three dozen plastic colored glasses. I was thinking of using them at some picnic, but who wants to wash 36 plastic glasses when I can use paper cups?

As I write this, I think I could take a number of these things, not my mom's kettle or anything milk glass, but others to our Olive "Home Redecorator Center" as my friend Donna Bryan dubbed the "Give-away/Takeaway" pile at the Transfer (AKA Dump) Station. Or, we have started a similar table at the American Legion Hall with a coffee can that miraculously fills with coins and bills and gets donated to the Food Pantry.

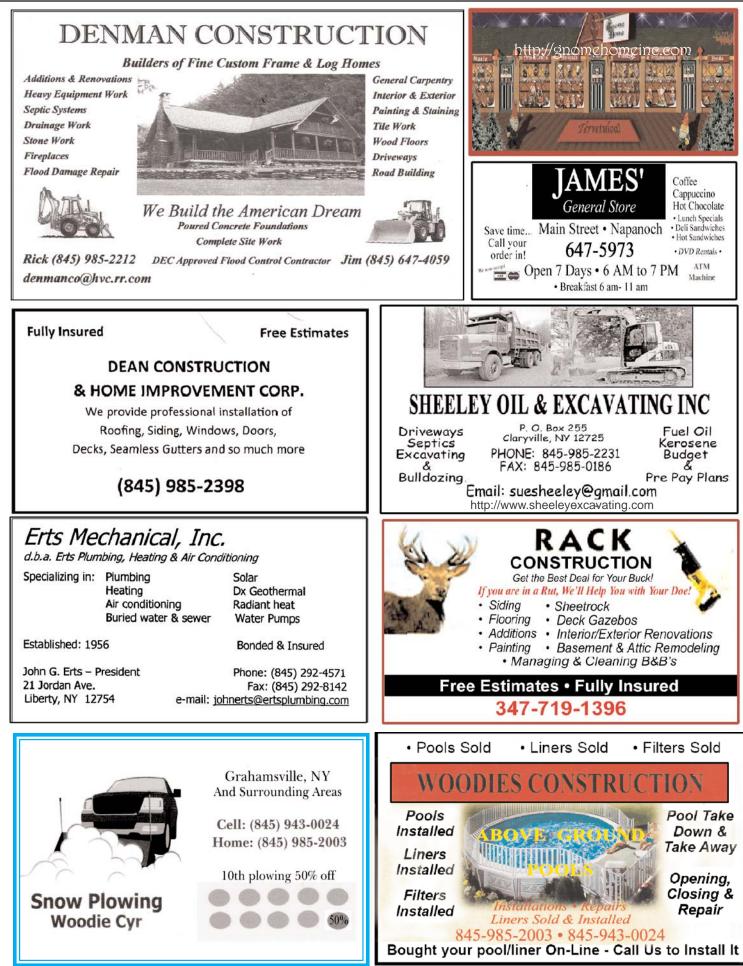

What do you have taking up space in your house? Do you have any un-wanted, wanted "guests" at your house you have trouble "evicting?"

The return of the Fresh Air Fund Program

I don't have to tell you it's been a crazy few pandemicallytinged years, but with a sigh of relief, the worst seems to be behind us. One thing I'm looking forward to is re-growing a summer program I've been part of for many years, and hoping to inspire other families to join in. My family welcomed a young NYC girl for summer visits over 9 years through the non-profit group Fresh Air Fund. I'm the volunteer co-chair for Sullivan County, and before the pandemic, more than a dozen families in our beautiful area shared summer vacations with city kids.

In the "before pandemic" days, we eagerly awaited Kailie's arrival each summer. In time, we were seeing each other in between the summer visit -- in the mountains and in New York City. She and our youngest daughter spent endless hours gig-gling, playing, and growing up together. Kailie has become our "city daughter."

Many low-income city kids have struggled mightily through the pandemic, and missed out on so many things, including the chance to experience summer breaks full of fresh air, swimming every day, playing outside until dark, and stargazing. Local families can open their homes and hearts again through volunteer hosting. It's as simple as doing what you and your family already plan to do - just with one more person.

WHERE DVAA, 37 Main Street, Narrowsburg, NY 12764

Free and open to the public, masks recommended

The Delaware Valley Arts Alliance (DVAA) is excited to announce its upcoming spring exhibitions. Opening on Saturday, April 1st, are two distinct exhibitions that each remix, re-envision, and reexamine their respective reference material. Joni Wehrli's exhibition, "Garden Variety," will be on view in the Alliance Gallery, and Desmond Beach's "Time is Filled with Swift Transition" will be presented in the Loft Gallery.

There will be an opening reception for both exhibitions at DVAA, located at 37 Main St, Narrowsburg, NY, on Saturday, April 1st, 2023, from 4-6 PM. The shows will be on view through Sunday, May 7th. DVAA's galleries are free and open to the public.

Joni Wehrli- Garden Variety On View April 1st - May 7th Opening Reception: April 1st, 4-6 PM Artist Talk is scheduled for May 6th; please see the website for details.

Joni Wehrli oscillates between painting and sculpture, creating otherworldly biomorphic imaginings. Her sculptures reference forms found in her paintings, which were inspired by illustrations in medical textbooks. When Wehrli extracts these organic forms from her paintings and transitions them into sculptures, the results expose the artist's comical side, revealed through her joining together of disparate and often unyielding materials.

Joni Wehrli is a painter and sculptor who lives and works in New York City and Livingston Manor. She began her career during the 1980s in the East Village and has had multiple solo exhibitions in NYC and Livingston Manor. Her work has been shown in group exhibitions in galleries, alternative spaces, and university museums in New York and throughout the East Coast, including White Columns, Pace University, SUNY Albany, Hartwick College, and Marymount Manhattan College. She is a board member of the Catskill Art Space and serves as board liaison on CAS's Art Council.

Desmond Beach Time is Filled with Swift Transition -On View Apr 1st - May 7th Opening Reception: April 1st, 4-6 PM

Artist Talk is scheduled for May 6th; please see the website for details.

The writer James Baldwin described: "To be a Negro in this country and to be relatively conscious is to be in a rage almost all the time." This quote has always resonated with Desmond Beach as a Black man whose lifelong pursuit is, as he states: "... to genuinely and honestly express my lived experience through art-making."

The African storytelling tradition is a thread that runs through Beach's series of fiber and mixed media artworks. Honoring his immediate ancestors, as well as those of the African Diaspora, is a priority. Beach's highest goal is to turn the terrible into the beautiful. His work is inspired by recent and historical developments in the African American experience as well as anti-Blackness. Inspired by images of Black people during the Middle Passage, in the Jim Crow South, and by their representation in today's mass media, his artwork frequently addresses the racial stereotypes that affect Black people. The work's deliberateness remixes, reclaims, and reexamines the Black struggle. The works of art serve as a forum for illuminating the existence of the nameless, grief, celebration, and resistance.

Desmond Beach is an artist and educator based in New York City. He earned his MFA from the Rinehart School of Sculpture at the Maryland Institute College of Art (MICA) and his BFA from MICA. Beach is currently a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Plymouth in the UK. He has been a visiting lecturer/artist at institutions such as Coppin State University and Emerson College. Beach has been a fellow at the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown and Skidmore College, an artist-in-residence at Pyramid Atlantic Art Center in Silver Spring, MD, and the 2021-22 Bayard Rustin Residency Fellow in New York City, to name a few.

Beach is an interdisciplinary artist, the middle son of three boys born in Baltimore, MD. He is a project artist, meaning his work takes its point of departure from specific problems or tragedies. Beach finds inspiration for his work from growing up in Baltimore during the 1980s and 90s and his lived experience as a Black man. He creates sacred spaces for the spirits of his immediate ancestors and those of the African Diaspora to rest. Beach is also interested in sharing the reflective moments of everyday life. He connects with the viewer through various mediums, including sculpture, costume, fiber arts, installations, performances, and mixed media. He believes that his work as an artist is a calling.

Helena Pittman at Domesticities April 1st No Foolin'

Roses in a Striped Vase" 12" x 15"

Youngsville, NY- March 22, 2023 -Helena Pittman returns to Domesticities for the first time in ten years with a selection of recent paintings.

The opening reception will be Saturday, April 1st at 3 pm at Domesticities, 4055 State Route 52, Youngsville. The show will stay up through the month of April.

When speaking of her work, Helena said "I knew at fourteen I'd have to give my life to painting. I don't remember how I got to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, I most likely traveled by subway with my friend Audrey. We both majored in Art in High School, drawing and painting every day, five days in school and all weekend. Audrey's father was the movie poster illustrator, Moore Kosnet. I stood in the room of Impressionist Painters at the Met, blinded by the color and light those painting threw, and declared, "These are my people." It felt like coming home.

My mother had opened an aluminum folding table in my room and closed the door. There my temperas were lined up. I had begun drawing as a child, just never stopped.

I think of myself as a picture plane painter, working with the four-sided shape of the canvas or board. That shape is my window-the world to get working-until it seems to exist apart from me; color interactions, shapes, darks against lights-pictorial elements that have meaning only there in that image. I know when the painting is finished. I've climbed the steep mountain. It's a moment of awe."

LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

Opioid use disorder (OUD) has had a devastating impact in Sullivan County when you look at the number of lives we've lost, families broken apart, and the financial burden placed on medical, law enforcement, and social services. We lead the State in opioid overdose fatalities.

Some gains have been made in reducing stigma around medical disorders. For instance, public education and widespread use of effective medications have demystified depression, making it somewhat less taboo than it was in past generations. However, little progress has been made in removing the stigma around OUD. People continue to be blamed for their disorder. The public, and even many professionals in the healthcare and criminal justice systems, continue to view addiction as a result of moral weakness and flawed character. This keeps people with OUD from getting the best possible care and leads to overdose deaths.

If we want to see these folks back in jobs and school, caring for families, and contributing to society, we have to make sure that medications for opioid use disordersuch as naltrexone, methadone, and buprenorphine-are available in our community. Providers who are trained and willing to prescribe medications for opioid use disorder and knowledgeable pharmacists who stock these medications are crucial to our community's ability to help reduce overdose deaths.

We need to be a community that encourages people with opioid use disorder to seek out medical help, where employers will hire people engaged in recovery programs, and where non-violent offenders, when appropriate, are referred to recovery programs.

We need to be a community that respects the courage it takes to live with and overcome opioid use disorder.

We need to understand that use of medications for opioid use disorder is not "swapping one drug addiction for another..." It is a way to treat a brain that has been rewired by excessive exposure to opioids. These medications have been scientifically shown to be the most reliable and effective way to manage the disease.

We need to understand that the severity and persistence of opioid use disorder varies, and sometimes these medications must be continued, even indefinitely. We need to encourage persons with opioid use disorder to seek treatment and stay in treatment as long as needed.

Alleviating stigma is not easy. Change needs to come from all angles, which involves the hearts and minds of people with OUD, their loved ones, policymakers, and healthcare providers. There must be wider recognition that OUD is a chronic disease, and that there are FDA-approved medications that can help people with OUD manage their disease and achieve long-term recovery.

But even if you're not one of those mentioned above, everyone can make a difference by creating a stigma-free environment for people with OUD in your family, community, workplace, or health care setting. Learn more at www.HealTogetherNY.org/Sullivan.

DEC Announces Start of 15th Annual Amphibian Migrations and Road Crossings Project Volunteers Prepare to Document and Assist Salamanders and Frogs during Annual Breeding Migrations in Hudson Valley

Throughout the Hudson Valley, community volunteers are getting out their flashlights, reflective safety vests, and raingear in anticipation of annual amphibian breeding migrations, which typically begin in March, the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) announced today. Volunteers will document the migration and help salamanders and frogs as part of DEC's annual Amphibian Migrations and Road Crossings Project.

"The Hudson Valley is home to remarkable amphibian diversity and during this time of year, road mortality poses a significant threat to salamanders and frogs migrating from forests to vernal pools for breeding," said DEC Commissioner Basil Seggos. "DEC is grateful to the dedicated volunteers ready to assist amphibians attempting road crossings during their annual migrations. I encourage all New Yorkers and visitors traveling the state's roads to be on the lookout for these vulnerable amphibians and the dedicated volunteers keeping them safe."

The Amphibian Migrations and Road Crossings (AM&RC) Project was initiated by DEC's Hudson River Estuary Program and Cornell University to raise awareness about critical amphibian habitat, engage volunteers to help collect data on the annual migration, and reduce amphibian road mortality. More than 1,000 volunteers have participated in the effort since 2009, helping to move an estimated 32,565 salamanders, frogs, and toads safely across roads.

As temperatures rise and snow melts in the coming weeks, species like wood frog (Lithobates sylvatica), spotted salamander (Ambystoma maculatum), and Jefferson-blue spotted salamander complex (Ambystoma jeffersonianum x laterale) will emerge from underground winter shelters in the forest and head to vernal pools for breeding. Vernal pools are small, temporary wetlands that are critical breeding habitat for these amphibians. The pools hold water until summer, so the adult amphibians must gather, breed, and deposit eggs early enough to ensure their aquatic young can hatch, grow, and leave the pools before they dry up.

The timing of migration is weather-dependent with concentrated activity on the first rainy nights of late winter and early spring, after the ground has thawed and night air temperatures remain above 40 degrees Fahrenheit. The timing of migration varies throughout the Hudson River estuary watershed, but when weather conditions are just right, there can be explosive "big night" migrations with hundreds of amphibians on the move. On their journeys between forest habitat and breeding pools, these amphibians often need to cross roads, where mortality can be high even when traffic is low.

Project volunteers document road locations where they observe migrations in the Hudson Valley, record weather and traffic conditions, and identify and count the amphibians on the move. Volunteers also carefully help the amphibians to safely cross roads. Since the project started, volunteers have documented 20 species and counted 39,300 live amphibians, as well as nearly 16,600 migrating amphibians killed by passing vehicles. Species reported most frequently during migration nights include spotted salamander, wood frog, and spring peeper (Pseudacris crucifer). To a lesser degree, volunteers have also observed Jefferson-blue spotted salamander complex and four-toed salamander (Hemidactylium scutatum), species of conservation concern in New York. For more information go to: https://www.dec.ny.gov/animals/7179.html

Safety is paramount, and project volunteers are advised to take all necessary precautions. Volunteers are strongly encouraged to wear reflective safety vests and headlamps to increase visibility on dark roads, and should not interfere with passing vehicles. Amphibian safety is also important, and frogs and salamanders should be handled carefully with clean hands, free of hand sanitizer, lotion, and other substances that can be toxic to amphibians' porous skin.

With such a large geographic area to cover, the AM&RC Project benefits greatly from the support of local partners who assist with coordinating volunteers in their communities. This year, partners include Climate Smart Rhinebeck, Columbia Land Conservancy, Hudson Highlands Land Trust, Rensselaer Plateau Alliance, Saw Kill Watershed Community, Teatown Lake Reservation, Town of Bedford Conservation Board, and Town of Pound Ridge Conservation Board.

For more information, including a short video about amphibian migrations, visit DEC's website. DEC held in-person and virtual trainings for volunteers in February with 270 participants. New Yorkers interested in volunteering to participate in this annual event are encouraged to watch a series of training videos on YouTube and read the Volunteer Handbook (PDF). In addition, potential volunteers can access a recording of the training and use materials available on the project website to learn more. Anyone interested in receiving project updates and news about the migration can subscribe to the project e-newsletter through DEC Delivers.

DEC supports programs like the Amphibian Migration and Road Crossings Project to connect people to nature; educate about the importance of wetlands and healthy, connected forests; and encourage proactive conservation planning that prevents habitat fragmentation. Forests are carbon storage and sequestration powerhouses, making them an invaluable tool in New York's nation-leading fight against climate change. The program is also critical for maintaining the state's rich diversity of plants and animals, and especially the vernal pool breeding amphibians that are of conservation concern throughout their Northeast range.

Project volunteers are encouraged to use the hashtag #amphibianmigrationhv in their photos and posts on social media.

DEC Announces 16th Annual Juvenile Eel Monitoring Project Area Volunteers, Teachers, and Students Join DEC to Count Hudson River Eels

The New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) today announced that all along the Hudson River estuary, volunteers including teachers, students, and residents are donning waders and venturing into tributary streams to participate in ongoing research on migrating juvenile American eels (Anguilla rostrata).

"New York is home to significant habitat that is critical to the life-cycle of many migratory fish species," said DEC Commissioner Basil Seggos. "The Hudson River Eel Project connects students and local residents with nature gathering data that can be valuable for the future study of this species and its role in the Hudson Valley ecosystem."

Now in its 16th year, the project was initiated by DEC's Hudson River Estuary Program and Hudson River National Estuarine Research Reserve to gather data to inform multi-state management plans for eel conservation. Eel collection takes place at most sites daily from mid-March through mid-May. Since the project began, volunteers have caught, counted, and released more than one million juvenile eels into upstream habitat.

This spring, students, local volunteers, DEC staff, and partner organizations will monitor glass eels at 11 sites on the Hudson River from New York Harbor to the Capital Region.

American eels have one of the most unusual life cycles of any fish. The eels are hatched in the Sargasso Sea in the Atlantic Ocean, and every spring arrive in estuaries like the Hudson River as translucent, two-inch long "glass eels." DEC and volunteers check 10-foot, cone-shaped nets (fyke nets) specifically designed to catch these small eels during this life stage. Volunteer and student researchers then count and release the glass eels back into the water and record environmental data on temperature and tides. Most of the eels are released above dams, waterfalls, and other barriers so that the eels have better access to habitat. Eels will live in freshwater rivers and streams and for up to 30 years before returning to the sea to spawn.

Coastal states from Florida to Maine monitor the young-ofthe-year migrations of American eels, using the protocols of the Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Commission. Hudson River Eel Project participants are trained in these field collection protocols to ensure useful data is collected.

Anyone interested in volunteering for the eel project should email eelproject@dec.ny.gov, and include area of interest to find a nearby site. For more information on the project, visit DEC's website, or watch the eel project video on DEC's YouTube channel.

Governor Hochul Details Statewide Crime Data, Highlights Need for Public Safety Investments and Reforms in

Reforms in FY 2024 Budget

 Budget Proposal Dedicates $491.9 Million to Address Gun Violence, Reduce Recidivism, and Support Criminal Justice System in Pandemic Recovery
 Shooting Incidents with Injury Declined 17

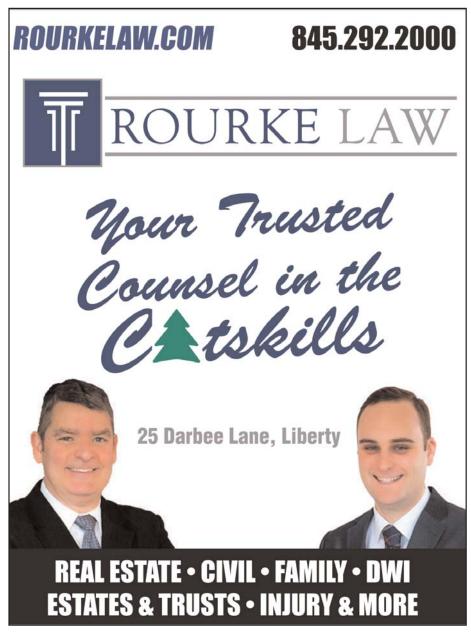

Percent in New York City and 15 Percent in the 20 Communities Reporting Gun Violence Data to the State in 2022 Compared to 2021
Murders Declined 11 Percent Statewide, Reported Crime Increased
Common-Sense Bail Proposal to Eliminate Confusion in Conflicting Laws and Hold Repeat

Confusion in Conflicting Laws and Hold Repeat Offenders and Violent Criminals Accountable Governor Kathy Hochul today announced new statewide crime data and highlighted the need for public safety investments and reforms included in her Fiscal Year 2024 budget. During a speech at the Capitol, the Governor outlined her $491.9 million investment in proven strategies to address and prevent gun crime and violence, reduce recidivism, and help the criminal justice system continue to rebound from pandemic-era disruptions. Shooting incidents with injury declined 17 percent in New York City and 15 percent in the 20 communities that report gun violence data to the state when comparing last year to 2021, and those incidents continued to decline in early 2023. The number of reported murders declined 11 percent statewide in last year, with 94 fewer individuals killed, and while overall index crime increased 21 percent, those numbers are nowhere near those seen in three decades ago. Governor Hochul also made the case for her common-sense proposal to remove the "least restrictive" standard the state's bail law, which is key to restoring judicial discretion and holding accountable those who continually reoffend and commit violent crimes.

"New Yorkers deserve a criminal justice system that prioritizes both safety and justice," Governor Hochul said. "Protecting New Yorkers is my number one priority, which is why my budget proposal includes record-level investments and proven strategies to ensure my administration can do just that. We are working overtime to fight crime across our state and are moving in the right direction but won't stop until every New Yorker can live in safety."

Governor Hochul highlighted her comprehensive criminal justice platform, additional crime trends that show progress achieved to date and improvements that still need to occur to ensure the effectiveness and efficiency of the system. Shooting incidents with injury continue to decline this year, with 55 fewer people (-34 percent) shot in the 20 communities that report gun violence data to the state and participate in the Gun Involved Violence Elimination (GIVE) initiative and 44 fewer individuals (-21 percent) wounded by gunfire in New York City, as of March 12, 2023. Overall index crime increased 21 percent: violent crime (murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault), 10 percent, and property crime (burglary, larceny, motor vehicle theft), 24 percent, during the same timeframe.

Key criminal justice system metrics have not rebounded to pre-pandemic levels in 2019, when New York State experienced an all-time low in reported crime after seven consecutive years of declines. Misdemeanor and felony arrests increased in 2022 but are still tracking lower than numbers reported by police agencies from 2017 through 2019. At the same time, the state's courts resolved fewer cases last year: 118,378 dispositions reported when compared to dispositions that occurred annually from 2017 through 2019.

New York State Division of Criminal Justice Services Commissioner Rossana Rosado said, "Equity and fairness are two pillars of the criminal justice system that are vital to ensure it is working effectively for all New Yorkers. Everyone who calls New York home should be able to rest assured that the system is continually improving to keep us safe. I am thankful for Governor Hochul's support and partnership in our commitment to true justice and safety for all."

(Contd. Pg. 32)

Governor Hochul Details Statewide Crime Data, Highlights Need for Public Safety Investments and Reforms in FY 2024 Budget

Governor Hochul's budget proposal doubles down on programs that have proven successful, investing $337 million: $110 million increase from FY 2023 budget, which contained the largest investment in public safety funding in a generation. The FY 2024 proposal includes:

o $84.1 million for youth employment programs, of which $37 million is for programs in Gun Involved Violence Elimination (GIVE) jurisdictions.

o $70 million for communities to respond to the aftermath of gun violence, of which $50 million is for community capital needs.

o $36.4 million for the Gun Involved Elimination (GIVE) initiative.

o $31.1 million for crime reduction, youth justice, and gang prevention programs.

o $25.9 million for State Police Community Stabilization Units (CSUs), increasing the number of these units from 16 to 25.

o $25 million for the SNUG Street Outreach program.

o $18 million for the state-supported Crime Ânalysis Center network, including the establishment of a new center in New York City, bringing the number of centers statewide to 11.

The Executive Budget proposal also includes significant funding to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the criminal justice system:

o $52 million in aid to prosecution funding for all 62 district attorneys' offices.

o $40 million to funding to support discovery reform implementation.

o $31.4 million for alternatives to incarceration programs.

o $20 million for pretrial services.

o $11.5 million for 20 County Re-entry Task Forces, which help individuals reintegrate to their communities after serving prison sentences.

Taken together, these investments fund a comprehensive plan that address all facets of the system. Governor Hochul also reiterated the need for her common-sense bail proposal to eliminate any confusion in the law. It would build upon other revisions made to the law since it took effect on January 1, 2020, which also focused on making sure that judges have discretion to set bail for those accused of serious crimes and repeat offenses.

On one hand, the law limits judges to making pretrial determinations based solely on the "least restrictive means" necessary to ensure a defendant's return to court. On the other hand, the law also directs judges to consider a range of other factors when setting bail. This results in finger-pointing and confusion when defendants commit additional crimes of violence. Governor Hochul's proposal restores a judge's discretion to consider factors already included in the law and make the appropriate individualized determination.

Since taking office, Governor Hochul has taken actions to strengthen New York State's gun violence prevention laws by banning ghost guns, large capacity magazines and body armor; expanding bail eligibility for gun crimes; raising the age to purchase semi-automatic weapons to 21; and launching the first-in-the-nation Interstate Task Force on Illegal Guns, which met again in mid-March, among other initiatives.

Following Spike in Maternal Mortality Gillibrand Raises Awareness of Her Maternal Mental Health Hotline and Calls for Full Implementation

Maternal Mental Health Conditions Are The Leading Cause Of Maternal Mortality Mental Health Is The Third-Leading Cause Of Pregnancy-Related Deaths In New York Women Who Need Help Can Call or Text 1-833-943-5746 (1-833-9-HELP4MOMS)

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Following the release of a CDC report that showed a sharp increase in maternal mortality in 2021, U.S. Senator Kirsten Gillibrand held a video press conference to raise awareness of her National Maternal Mental Health Hotline and call for its full implementation. The hotline provides free, 24/7 support to women and their families during and after pregnancy Gillibrand is pushing to expand public awareness of the hotline so that it can reach more women in need.

"Pregnancy and the postpartum period can be exceptionally challenging, but help is available for moms who are struggling or just need support," said Senator Gillibrand. "I worked to establish the National Maternal Mental Health Hotline so that women experiencing a maternal mental health condition have somewhere to turn for free, confidential care any time of day or night. I urge anyone who needs help to take advantage of this resource, and I will continue to work to improve maternal care and fight the maternal mortality crisis."

Recent reports by the CDC have shown disturbing increases in maternal mortality rates, particularly for women of color. Maternal deaths rose by 40% between 2020 and 2021, and the maternal death rate for Black women was more than twice the national average. The leading cause of these deaths was maternal mental health conditions, including substance use disorder, suicide, depression, and birth-related PTSD, but 75% of women with these conditions go untreated.

The National Maternal Mental Health Hotline provides free, confidential, 24/7 support to pregnant and postpartum women facing mental health challenges. Counselors are available by text and phone in English and Spanish and have access to interpreter services that can support 60 other languages. They are licensed or certified and are trained to provide culturally appropriate and trauma-informed support. Counselors are also able to provide referrals to local medical providers. To date, the hotline has helped more than 10,000 women with an average response time of under 1 minute.

The hotline can be reached at 1-833-943-5746 (1-833-9-HELP4MOMS). More information is available here. https://mchb.hrsa.gov/national-maternal-mental-health-hotline/faq Gillibrand is a longstanding champion for better maternal health care. She fought to include her Into the Light for Maternal Mental Health and Substance Use Disorders Act, which established and funds the National Maternal Mental Health Hotline, in the FY2023 appropriations bill. She supports the Black Maternal Health Momnibus Act, which includes her Moms Matter Act to invest in community-based programs that provide mental and behavioral health treatments and to provide funding to diversify the maternal mental health and substance use disorder workforce. She leads the Modernizing Obstetric Medicine Standards (MOMS) Act, which would develop standardized maternal safety best practices to prevent maternal mortality and morbidity and provide hospitals with the resources to help prevent maternal death and complications before, during, and after childbirth. Gillibrand also secured $17 million in maternal health care funding in the bipartisan FY2021 appropriations package and an additional $42 million in the FY2023 funding package.

Gillibrand has also taken action to address Black maternal mortality and eliminate racial bias in maternal care by advocating for federal funding for evidence-based training programs to reduce implicit bias in maternal health care delivery.

Governor Hochul Initiative to Improve Food Benefit Access for Women, Infants and Children

• Feedback Collected Through Live Online Chat Function, Interviews and Surveys Will Be Used to Improve New Yorkers' Experience with the WIC Program

• Governor Delivers on State of the State Initiative to Make Customer Experience and Benefits Participation a State Priority; Improve Delivery of WIC Benefits

Governor Kathy Hochul today announced a new client feedback initiative that will improve understanding of the challenges New Yorkers face enrolling in the Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children, also known as WIC. Announced as part of Governor Hochul's 2023 State of the State address, the New York State Department of Health will partner with Code for America to pilot a live, online chat program that will help the agency gather client feedback to improve the WIC program and enrollment statewide.

"Despite being a critical resource for struggling families, the WIC program isn't used by nearly as many New Yorkers who are eligible for these food benefits or by many families who are already enrolled in the program," Governor Hochul said. "This initiative will help us identify ways to eliminate bureaucratic hurdles, simplify the enrollment processes and implement new technology so that struggling families have better access to healthy, nutritious foods."

Initially, Code for America will help implement a live online chat function to replace the Department of Health's automated chat bot that appears on the agency's WIC page, which will connect individuals to a WIC staffer for live interaction. Live interaction is an effective way to guide applicants through the process and enrollees with using their benefits, while also providing an invaluable source of feedback that can be coupled with client interviews and other qualitative and quantitative research methods to better understand challenges with WIC enrollment and usage.

During a second phase of the project, the Department of Health will work with Code for America to implement improvements to the WIC program based on the gathered feedback. The partnership will enable the agency to determine what is preventing eligible families from participating and taking full advantage of the program and then use that information to improve the delivery of WIC services.

Acting Health Commissioner Dr. James McDonald said, "By gathering input from families participating in the WIC program, we can enhance the customer experience and make it easier for New York families to access the nutritious foods required for healthy growth and development of children. By collaborating with Code for America to test live chat and other techniques for gathering input, we can seek ways to help increase participation and make the program more user-friendly for those who depend on WIC."

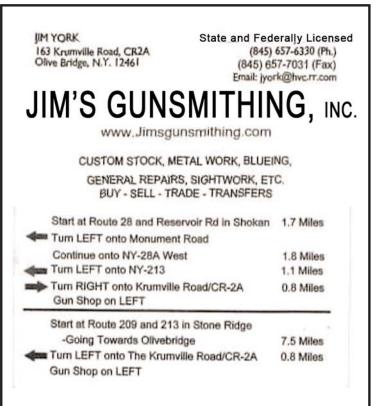

The WIC program provides federal funding to states for supplemental foods, health care referrals, and nutrition education for low-income pregnant, breastfeeding, and non-breastfeeding postpartum women; and to infants and children up to age 5 who are found to be at nutritional risk. The Department of Health was among four agencies selected to participate in the second cohort of Code for America's Safety Net Innovation Lab, which is aimed at making state-administered public benefits programs more equitable and accessible.

Nationally, about half of the families eligible for WIC participate in the program and those enrolled in the program do not consistently use their food benefits. Data compiled by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Service this year found that roughly 706,000 New Yorkers were eligible for WIC in 2020, but only 363,000 participated in the program. For more information go to: https://www.fns.usda.gov/wic/eligibility-and-program-reach-estimates-2020

Food insecurity has been consistently associated with poor health outcomes in children, including poorer overall health status, acute and chronic health problems, and limited healthcare access. Participation in WIC has been associated with healthier births, improved birth weights, reduced risk of infant mortality, better infant-feeding practices, more nutritious diets, better access to primary and preventive health care, and improved cognitive development in children, among other positive health outcomes.

The initiative with Code for America is part of Governor Hochul's plans to make government work better for New Yorkers by transforming the way they access services and benefits. Significant technological enhancements are now being implemented to reduce bureaucratic hurdles and improve access; reduce call wait times; use e-signature technology; launch 'one ID' to improve how residents interact with certain state agencies online; and modernize state agency websites and applications to improve the user experience.

Code for America Chief Executive Officer Amanda Renteria said, "Code for America works shoulder-to-shoulder with government partners and community organizations with the goal of creating a human-centered safety net. Through the Safety Net Innovation Lab, state governments are taking major steps toward systemic change in how people receive benefits like food assistance, health care and other basic needs."

Wrapping up Another Week in Washington – Congressman Pat Ryan

As we wrap up another productive week, I wanted to give you an update on all that I've been doing on behalf of the Hudson Valley!

MARCHING TO END GUN VIOLENCE

Five years ago, I joined students and families from across the Hudson Valley in the first March for our Lives to end gun violence.

Five years later, we should not have to still be marching, but we are. And we will keep marching until we see real change.

The weapons I carried in combat have no place on our streets or in our schools.

ENDING THIS GENERATION'S FOREVER WAR

Monday marked twenty years since the U.S. initiated Operation Iraqi Freedom.

It was a somber occasion, as I thought about the sacrifices made by my thousands of fellow veterans who served in Iraq and who carried out their mission with dignity and honor.

With these heroes in mind, this week, I demanded a vote to repeal the Authorization for Use of Military Force (AUMF.)

I saw the costs of this war firsthand. It's time to end the era of allowing Washington politicians who have never worn the uniform to write bad foreign policy that sends our sons and daughters into harm's way.

ANNOUNCING THE ANNUAL CONGRESSIONAL ART COMPETITION

I could not be more excited to invite the high schoolers of NY-18 to submit their artwork to enter into the annual Congressional Art Competition.

The winning artwork will hang in our nation's Capitol and I look forward to seeing the masterpieces from New York and all 50 states.

Please drop off or mail your paintings, drawings, collages, prints, mixed media, computer-generated art, and photography by 4:00pm on Friday, April 21.

Click here for full details and submission instructions. https://patryan.house.gov/services/art-competition

ENSURING CLEAN WATER FOR ALL

Wednesday marked World Water Day, and I was proud to join my colleagues in demanding increased funding for lead testing in schools.

Everyone in the Hudson Valley deserves access to clean water, air and soil, and I'll keep fighting to make that a reality.

That means bringing federal funds back here to strengthen the Hudson Valley's water infrastructure. The EPA and the NYS Environmental Facilities Corporation are hosting a webinar on current funding opportunities to improve water systems on Thursday, March 30, at 12:00pm.

Register here. https://www.eventbrite.com/e/us-epa-nys-efcwater-infrastructure-webinar-for-municipalities-tickets-591725977327

SUPPORTING OUR LOCAL FARMERS

Tuesday, we celebrated our country's farmers and producers on National Agriculture Day. I want to thank the farmers of the Hudson Valley who work day in and day out to make sure our nation is strong, healthy, and has food on the table.

I recently enjoyed meeting with the Millbrook Garden Club to discuss my work supporting farmers and the environment, including my support of the Growing Climate Solutions Act, which will provide financial and technical assistance to farmers who implement resource-conserving practices on their land.

I am committed to continuing to support our farmers and strengthening a sustainable food system.

STRENGTHENING MILITARY ALLIANCES

Last week, President Biden announced the AUKUS alliance plan to ensure a free and open Indo-Pacific alongside our allies of Great Britain and Australia.

This plan charts a bold path forward to protect our values and promote our security and economic interests.

This week, I was proud to vote for the AUKUS

Implementation Act and am looking forward to continuing to work with colleagues towards the plan's success.

C E L E B R A T I N G WOMEN'S HISTORY As we continue to celebrate Women's History Month, I wanted to highlight NY-18's own Eleanor Roosevelt. A trailblazing human rights activist, Roosevelt represented the very best of the Hudson Valley.

To learn more about her fight for equality for all Americans, visit the Eleanor Roosevelt National Historic Site in Hyde Park or take a virtual tour here !

ENDING ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE

Thank you to the New York State Alzheimer's Advocates for your work and for bringing your voices to Washington.

Together, we will fight to finally put an end to Alzheimer's Disease.

As co-chair of the Election Integrity Caucus, I reintroduced Leading the Charge to Defend and Strengthen Parent's Rights in Schools

This week, the House passed H.R. 5, the Parents Bill of Rights Act. I was an original co-sponsor of this legislation, which is built on five core principles:

Parents have the right to know what their children are being taught.

Parents have the right to be heard.

Parents have the right to see the school budget and spending.

Parents have the right to protect their child's privacy.

Parents have the right to keep their children safe

From unconstitutional mask mandates to coping with learning loss from shutdowns, our nation's children have faced numerous challenges these past few years. Many parents also became aware of concerning things being taught in our schools, like Critical Race Theory or sexualized content in curriculum.

As a mother, a conservative, and a steadfast supporter of our educators, families, and children, I believe it is time to restore transparency in our schools and empower parents. I am honored to support this legislation that will encourage transparency and accountability in our school systems and restore trust between our educators and communities.

Supporting Pro-Life Pregnancy Centers

This week, we introduced the Pregnancy Resource Center Defense Act in the 118th Congress. This commonsense legislation will help protect pro-life pregnancy centers from attacks by radical activists and ensure attackers are held accountable for their violent actions.

Following the Supreme Court's Dobbs v. Jackson decision last year, pro-life pregnancy centers nationwide have become victims of violent attacks from radical pro-abortion extremist groups, such as "Jane's Revenge." CompassCare Pregnancy Services, a pro-life pregnancy center in Amherst, New York, was firebombed in June of last year by the group. Just last week, the facility was criminally vandalized once again.

Pregnancy resource centers across the country are continuing to be attacked and vandalized by radical pro-abortion extremist groups. The recent vandalization of CompassCare and increased attacks on pro-life facilities are reprehensible. The perpetrators of these attacks must be found and prosecuted.

It is my honor to reintroduce the Pregnancy Resource Center Defense Act on behalf of women and families everywhere who visit centers like CompassCare to receive compassionate and professional care and support. House Republicans remain committed to protecting and preserving the right to life for all.

Bringing Awareness to Heat-Related Illnesses

This week, I introduced the Timothy J. Barber Act, which would require the Department of Labor to study the Occupational Safety and Health Administration's (OSHA) spending on technical support and compliance assistance for heat-related illnesses and recommend ways to increase its effectiveness. Technical support and compliance assistance help small businesses comply with OSHA regulations and defray the costs of compliance.

Tragically, Tim Barber, 35, passed away on July 7, 2020, at a work site on the Route 63 Bridge over the Genesee River in Geneseo. It was Tim's second day on the job when the temperature hit 93 degrees with a heat index of 95 degrees, and he died from hyperthermia.

After a nine-month investigation, OSHA determined that Tim's employer "failed to train him and implement other safeguards to protect him and other employees against extreme heat hazards." Heat-related illnesses like hyperthermia are easily preventable. We must work with companies to help them protect their employees from hyperthermia. OSHA's compliance assistance and technical support should continue to help our small businesses protect workers without increasing costs. By introducing this bill today, we remember and celebrate the life of Tim Barber while working to make OSHA's spending more effective.

Additionally, as we begin to enter warmer months, I encourage all of my constituents, especially those who work outdoors, to be careful in the heat, drink water, and take rest breaks when necessary. Together, we can honor Tim's life and prevent others from needlessly suffering from hyperthermia.

I voted "Yes" on H.R. 1159, To amend the Taiwan Assurance Act of 2020 to require periodic reviews and updated reports relating to the Department of State's Taiwan Guidelines. This bill increases the Department of State's reporting requirements to include a biannual update on U.S.-Taiwanese relations and any efforts to deepen and expand our relationship. As China continues to saber rattle and threaten Taiwan, the U.S. must continue to develop our partnership and strategic alliance. This bill passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 404-7. (Contd. Pg.

I voted "Yes" on the Veto message for H.J. Res. 30, Providing for congressional disapproval under chapter 8 of title 5, United States Code, of the rule submitted by the Department of Labor relating to "Prudence and Loyalty in Selecting Plan Investments and Exercising Shareholder Rights". After Congress passed a nullification resolution on a bipartisan basis, President Biden vetoed this resolution so private sector employee benefit plans and pensions can prioritize climate change and other far-left priorities over increasing the returns for beneficiaries. Further, as numerous single and multi-employer pensions continue to struggle with solvency issues, President Biden is allowing plan managers to deprioritize returns to further their leftist political priorities, increasing the risk of future insolvency. Our seniors and those nearing retirement deserve fiduciaries that act in their best financial interests and who are not preoccupied with furthering their personal political beliefs. This rule violates this critical principle. I was honored to vote for this resolution the first time and I was honored to support this veto override to roll back President Biden's shameful veto. This veto override failed to pass the House of Representatives by a vote of 219-200.

I voted "Yes" on H.R. 5, the Parents Bill of Rights Act. The pandemic was eye-opening for millions of parents across the country who saw their children being taught inappropriate content. Then when these parents decided to speak out on and engage with their children's education, they were maligned and labeled domestic terrorists by the Biden administration. That is why I am an original cosponsor of this critical bill, which will guarantee parents the right to know what their children are being taught and what is occurring in our nation's schools. My amendment was also included in this bill, which will require schools to inform parents if college-credit courses are terminated, including Advanced Placement and dual-enrollment classes. These programs provide students a cost-effective way to reduce the overall price of college. I am a strong supporter of every parent's right to be involved in their child's education and this legislation will further this important goal. This bill passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 213-208.

I voted "Yes" on H. Con. Res. 25, Authorizing the use of Emancipation Hall in the Capitol Visitor Center for a ceremony as part of the commemoration of the days of remembrance of victims of the Holocaust. This bill would allow for a Days of Remembrance Ceremony to be held in the Capitol Visitor Center on April 20, 2023. As anti-Semitism continues to rise throughout our country, Holocaust knowledge is at an all-time low. A recent survey showed that only 53% of American adults know that approximately six million Jews were killed in the Holocaust and 60% did not know how Hitler rose to power. These numbers are startling and we must do more to increase Holocaust education and awareness, especially as survivors continue to diminish in number. We must never allow a horror like the Holocaust to happen again. We must never forget. This bill passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 405-0

CONGRESSMAN MARC MOLINARO SERVING NY-19

Rep. Molinaro Introduces Bipartisan Bill to Establish Global Safety Standard for Aircraft Repairs & Protect Domestic Maintenance Jobs

Washington, DC - U.S. Rep. Marc Molinaro (R-NY-19) today introduced the Global Aircraft Maintenance Safety Improvement Act. This bipartisan legislation establishes a global safety standard for American aircraft repairs and removes the incentive to offshore aircraft maintenance jobs. Rep. Molinaro introduced this bill alongside U.S. Reps. Julia Brownley (D-CA-26), Nicole Malliotakis (R-NY-11), John Garamendi (D-CA-8) and 22 other Members of Congress.

There are nearly one thousand Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) certified maintenance and repair stations operating outside the United States. These stations service American aircraft, but operate at a far lower safety standard than their American-based counterparts, incentivizing businesses to move these jobs overseas.

Rep. Molinaro's legislation requires minimum certification standards for mechanics and technicians, security checks of workers and facilities, annual unannounced FAA inspections, and drug and alcohol tests.

Rep. Molinaro said, "The FAA has certified nearly one thousand foreign maintenance facilities that service American aircraft. These foreign based facilities, however, are held to a lower safety standard, offshoring jobs that can be done in America. My bill establishes a global safety standard for maintenance facilities so the highest level of aircraft safety standards are upheld and removes the incentive to move maintenance jobs overseas. We can enhance safety and encourage quality high paying jobs here at home."

Rep. Brownley said, "The U.S. has the safest air transportation system in the world, due to our rigorous standards for safety at all levels. It is past time that we close loopholes that allow foreign repair stations to undermine our safety standards. I am pleased to co-author this important legislation with Congressman Molinaro, Congressman Garamendi, and Congressman Malliotakis, which will ensure that aircraft maintenance that has been outsourced to foreign counties must comply with the same safety standards as U.S. aircraft maintenance facilities." (Contd. Pg. 57)

Rep. Molinaro Introduces Bipartisan Bill to Establish Global Safety Standard for Aircraft Repairs & Protect Domestic Maintenance Jobs

(From {Pg. 56) Sean O'Brien, President of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters General said, "The Teamsters Union strongly commends this effort to address the scourge of unsafe, outsourced aircraft maintenance. By putting an end to the twotiered safety system, we can ensure that the planes we fly on are properly maintained and remove the incentives for airlines to endanger the flying public by sending work overseas. The passage of this legislation, alongside quality training efforts like the labor-management designed Calibrate program at United Airlines, will guarantee a bright future for union-represented technicians, the aircraft maintenance industry and aviation safety."

John Samuelsen, President of the Transportation Workers Union International said, "The double standard found in overseas aircraft maintenance, repair, and overhaul work is the dirty little secret of U.S. air carriers. While these facilities outside the U.S. are FAA certified, the mechanics who work in them and the facilities themselves are not held to the same standards as their U.S. counterparts. This unlevel playing field encourages U.S. air carriers to offshore aircraft maintenance work, putting passenger and air crew safety at risk. The Global Aircraft Maintenance Safety Improvement Act is much-needed legislation that would close these gaps, increase the safety of our airspace, and return good jobs to the U.S."

Richie Johnsen, Vice President for the International Association of Machinists said, "The traveling public deserves to know that commercial aircraft maintenance is done under the strictest standards possible. "As the largest air transport labor union in North America, we commend Congressman Molinaro for introducing the Global Aircraft Maintenance Safety Improvement Act. The IAM will continue to do everything in our power to ensure that aircraft maintenance, repair and overhaul is performed by the best aircraft mechanics in the world under a standardized set of rules for U.S. carriers."

Greg Regan, President of the AFL-CIO Transportation Trades Department said, "For 20 years, we've called for greater FAA oversight of foreign repair stations where U.S. aircraft undergo maintenance. It's simple: foreign repair stations should be held to the same safety standards as our domestic repair stations. We applaud Reps. Molinaro, Brownley, Malliotakis, and Garamendi for introducing this legislation to implement long overdue safety reforms."

NYS Oberacker Named to Transporttion Budget Conference Committee Advocates for state funding to ensure local roads and bridges receive attention they deserve

ALBANY- State Senator Peter Oberacker (R/C - Schenevus) today took part in the initial meeting of the joint budget conference committee on transportation.

"Bipartisan conference committees are a key part of the budget process as we work to reconcile differences between proposals from the governor, senate, and assembly. It is crucial that legislative leaders adhere to the public budget discussions and avoid the Albany tradition of cutting backroom deals that fail to put all New Yorkers first," said Senator Oberacker.

Regarding his assignment on the transportation budget conference committee, Senator Oberacker said:

Senator Peter Oberacker makes opening remarks during the transportation budget conference committee. Senator Oberacker called for regional parity in state highway spending as well as additional support for programs that aid with local highway and bridge improvements.

"Local roads and bridges, and the dedicated workers who maintain them, are essential to public safety and our economy. Earlier this year I joined with hundreds of highway workers from across the state calling for increased funding to help ensure our infrastructure needs are met. I am continuing to press for increases to programs that lead to improved roads and bridges, while keeping local taxes in check. It is also key that the final transportation budget is fair and equitable for all areas of the state."

The conference committees are made up of five senators and five assemblymen tasked with negotiating budget differences between the houses, in concert with the governor, to develop a final spending plan.

"There is a great deal of work ahead as we near the April 1st budget deadline and I look forward to the discussions moving forward. A fiscally sound budget that meets the needs of those I represent with a focus on affordability, public safety, and improved opportunities is my goal," Senator Oberacker concluded.

Ulster County Announces Projects Selected for Opioid Settlement Fund Awards

KINGSTON, NY - The Ulster County Executive's Office and Ulster County Department of Mental Health announced today that four projects have been chosen to receive an award from the County's Opioid Settlement Fund allocation. In November 2022, the County initiated a Request for Proposals for Opioid Response Projects and encouraged organizations to apply for funding for projects focused on prevention, harm reduction, treatment, recovery, and technology.

The priority areas were identified by the Ulster County Opioid Strategic Action Team (OSAT), a group led by the Ulster County Department of Mental Health (UCDMH). OSAT is composed of nearly 50 community organizations that meet monthly to review data and work together to develop strategies to reduce overdoses and fatalities. Twelve proposals were received and reviewed by an evaluation committee that included representatives from the Ulster County Department of Mental Health, the Ulster County Executive's Office, the Ulster County Department of Finance, and the Community Service Board.

The projects will be funded through Opioid Settlement funds received by Ulster County as part of a landmark settlement with Johnson & Johnson, a manufacturer of prescription opioids, and the three major pharmaceutical distributors -AmerisourceBergen, Cardinal Health, and McKesson. Ulster County was awarded $7.9M over 18 years as part of the agreement. In 2023, Ulster County will dedicate $1.3 million of the settlement funds it has received toward new projects.

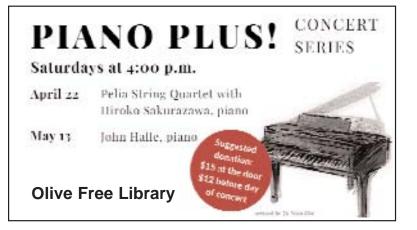

The four chosen projects include an Outpatient Detox Program, an Expanded Outpatient Treatment Program, support for a Recovery Housing Program, and development of an Opioid Overdose Spike Response Protocol.

o $797,000 will be awarded to the Samadhi Recovery Community Outreach Center for three projects that fill critical gaps in the Ulster County behavioral health continuum of care.

o $410,400 to establish the first Outpatient Detox Program in the region. Samadhi will develop a medically-supervised outpatient detox program, which will reduce the need for out-of-county detox and inpatient care.

o $129,600 to expand Samadhi's licensed outpatient clinic with the addition of three Credentialed Alcoholism and Substance Abuse Counselors (CASACs), one certified recovery peer advocate, and one administrative/billing staff member.

o $257,000 to expand staff at Samadhi Refuge - an emergency housing facility for adults with Substance Use Disorder seeking recovery - by adding four certified peer recovery advocates and a dedicated vehicle for transporting clients to appointments.

¹$74,985 will be awarded to Ellenville Regional Hospital to develop a targeted and collaborative response to opioid overdose spikes, which are defined as three or more overdoses in the County within a 24-hour period.

In addition to these projects, Ulster County has dedicated Opioid Settlement Funds toward a Mental Health in Schools program for middle school students, as well as a Street Outreach Program that will provide harm reduction education, naloxone kits, transportation to appointments, and connections to medication and treatment.

The opioid crisis continues to take a major toll on our communities, particularly with the spread of deadly fentanyl on the streets, and we remain laser-focused as a County on pursuing prevention, treatment, and recovery solutions that will save lives," said Ulster County Executive Jen Metzger. "I want to thank our community partners for submitting worthy projects to be supported by Opioid Settlement Funds, and I want to give special thanks to Attorney General Letitia James for her successful fight to secure these funds from the opioid manufacturers who aggressively pushed these highly-addictive drugs on people all across America and created the crisis we now face."

"Though we continue to be saddened by the circumstances that resulted in these settlements, we are glad to be able to put these funds to good use and prevent future loss of life," said Tara McDonald, Ulster County Mental Health Commissioner. "The Opioid Strategic Action Team has been working tirelessly for years to closely examine what is happening in our community and working together to identify the best approaches to reduce overdose and help our residents find a path to recovery. We are confident these four projects will fill vital gaps and strengthen our ability to fight this epidemic."

David McNamara, Founder and Executive Director of The Samadhi Recovery Community Outreach Center said, "Samadhi is going to utilize the Opioid Settlement funding to develop and grow our continuum of care for individuals suffering from addiction. First, we will be developing the county's first Medically Supervised Outpatient Detox to treat the acute effects of opiate withdrawal and fulfill the desperate need for detox facilities in Ulster County. Second, we will expand our current Outpatient Treatment Center and increase our ability to provide individual and group substance use treatment in a compassionate, and trauma-informed manner. Third, we will be increasing the staffing at Samadhi Refuge, our emergency housing facility in Saugerties, NY, in order to provide further peer support, transportation, case management, and crisis intervention for the individuals living there. These three programs will allow Samadhi to provide a full spectrum of care for individuals with opioid use disorder regardless of recovery progress."

Steve Kelley, President of Ellenville Regional Hospital said, "We are very pleased to have been awarded funding to develop an opioid overdose spike response that unifies the effort of many agencies across the county to deliver much more timely, focused, and expansive outreach to the region experiencing the spike. The outcome will be to reduce overdoses and deaths."

All awards are subject to approval by the Ulster County Legislature.

UC Clerk's Office Announces Exhibit Recognizing Donations to the Ulster County Archives

Kingston, NY - Ulster County Clerk Nina Postupack announces the exhibit "Into My Hands: Recent Donations to the Ulster County Archives" featuring a sampling of records donated to the Ulster County Archives between 2011 and 2022. The exhibit is now on display in the 2nd floor Archives Gallery located in the Ulster County Office Building, 244 Fair Street, Kingston.

In 2005, the Records Donation Program was designed to encourage the rightful return of official county records; those that were at one time created by, filed with, or in the possession of, the County of Ulster. The donations received since then have expanded that original design and we are pleased to share some of the many interesting items now residing in the Archives. Exhibiting these items is also a way to recognize those who have donated. Since the last recognition event in 2010, forty donations of records and dozens of books for our reference library have been received. The Clerk's Office would like to take this opportunity to express our sincere appreciation for their invaluable support and invite them to the Archives Gallery to view the recognition plaques engraved with their names.

The donated records date from 1678 to 2022 and vary in content and form. There are land sale transactions, court records, maps, family collections, photographs, reference books and even an unexpectedly popular "I Voted" sticker. Despite the wide variety of materials included in the donated records, each donation is unique and provides valuable insight into the people and events that have shaped this region over time. Taken together, these materials offer a comprehensive and multi-faceted view of the history of the area, providing a valuable resource for researchers, historians, and anyone interested in learning more about the past.

"Preserving history is not just about looking back, but also ensuring that our stories and experiences are passed down to future generations. The donations to the Ulster County Archives are a testament to the power of community and the importance of preserving our collective memory," stated County Clerk Nina Postupack. "The generosity of those who donate them allows us to preserve and learn from our history, and for that we are forever grateful."

For further information on the Records Donation Program, this exhibit or other outreach programs of the Ulster County Clerk's Office, please contact County Clerk Nina Postupack at (845) 340-3040, visit the archives online at ulstercountyny.gov/archives, or find us on Facebook.

Stockade FC Announces Schedule for 2023 NPSL Season

Stockade FC and the National Premier Soccer League (NPSL) have announced the schedule for the upcoming 2023 summer season. Stockade FC will play this summer's matches at Tenney Stadium on the campus of Marist College in Poughkeepsie, NY.

With the new alignment of the 5-team North Atlantic Conference (Cedar Stars are not returning in 2023), Stockade FC will compete in 10 regular season matches. The season kicks off with a 3-match away stand which includes trips to New York Shockers (Sat May 6) and Valeo FC (Sat May 20). Stockade FC will also travel to nearby Pathfinder FC (Sat May 13) of USL2 for a mid-season friendly.

The home opener at Tenney Stadium will take place on Memorial Day Weekend as Syracuse FC (Sat May 27) visits, followed by a visit from Connecticut rivals, Hartford City FC (Sat June 3).

Stockade FC will travel to Vermont for a midweek friendly on June 7th for a match up with the incredibly popular USL2 club, Vermont Green FC (Wed June 7).

Stockade FC will return to NPSL play with a midweek trip to Syracuse FC (Wed June 14) before returning to Tenney Stadium as Valeo FC (Sat June 17) heads to Poughkeepsie on Saturday.

A key set of matchups looks to be a late June afternoon showdown with Hartford City FC (Sun June 25) at Trinity Health Stadium and a busy week at Tenney Stadium as Valeo FC (Wed June 28) and New York Shockers (Sat July 1) come to town.

To wrap up the regular season, Stockade FC travels to Syracuse for the second time to meet Syracuse FC (July 8) in the final regular season date.

Stockade FC will meet Hartford City and New York Shockers twice each, home and away. By random draw, Stockade FC will see three matchups with Valeo FC and Syracuse FC. Valeo will travel to Poughkeepsie twice, while Stockade FC will head north to Syracuse on two occasions. The odd number of teams is the key contributor to mid-week NPSL matches in 2023.

This year's North Atlantic Conference playoffs will feature a 3 @ 2 matchup on Wednesday July 12th before the winner visits the #1 seeded team on Saturday July 15th for the conference crown.
